SOUND THE WHISTLE.

There was a strangely unfamiliar note in the chorus of mine whistles that sounded their shrill call to work this morning. It seemed like a revival of the dead, an opening of the graveyard, but the shrilling of the sirens was welcomed by hundreds of men eager to resume their places in the mines. Once more the roads leading to the Divide were filled with divers and motor trucks indicating the first returning pulse of traffic to the idle district. It was not expected that the mines would find anything like full crews for the vacancies created by the strike and therefore there was no disappointment when it was found that full crews could not be had for all prospects. Nevertheless there was a big beginning, when almost no mining was done for several months of operations. At the same time the strike was declared the partiality carried the names of local men as if the first sign of a strike probably one-fourth of the number left camp for about two weeks where they were needed as supervisors or "bosses" to look after the mine workings. A few weeks ago the mines were gradually drifting into the hands of the small companies. A number of the men, for their families in Tonopah, were left to look after the mines. Some of these were dissatisfied that they had to go to the strike. These men will return as soon as they can and the situation in Tonopah is back in the hands of the men who made the camp, and their employers and agents have been successful as a factor in the industrial situation. The records of the mine in the past few months show the fact that only a small percentage of the old miners returned to work. The small companies, however, are not returning to work as soon as the industrial adjustment was reached. It will take time to rebuild the mines in Tonopah and the Divide to their former working forms, but a bona mining camp has a lure for the miner that few can resist.

The Divide mines are at the threshold of very interesting developments and when the fruits of the first four months pioneering become apparent and values begin pouring out of the ground, there will be no complaint about a shortage of men. Tonopah and the Divide made a good start this morning and each day will witness accessions to the ranks of the workers that will completely restore the hum of activity to the neighborhood.

UNIONS IN THE SCHOOLS.

There cannot be cited a single argument against the organization of school teachers in one of the valid for the purpose of bettering their financial condition and elevating the standards of the profession. The teacher has been exploited so long that she is considered an easy mark for trustees who aim to make a showing of education within their respective precincts without paying any special attention to the merits of the applicants for positions. In this way many of the minor districts have been imposed on through having teachers engaged who were not capable of filling the berths to which they were assigned. Rural trustees have been obsessed with the idea of getting the teacher's services for as little as possible, much in the same way that they would haggle with a country trader over the sale of a calf or pig. In the larger districts there has been too much exploiting of teachers by the so-called teachers' agencies which pretend to furnish competent instructors for all branches of service. The system is one that should be severely deprecated by every self-respecting school trustee. Teachers furnished by these agencies are compelled to pay a percentage of their small salaries to the agency that secured their appointment. In this way the teacher has been victimized to a great extent. Many of these agencies report as high as 25 per cent of the salary received during the first six months and 10 per cent for the remainder of the school term, leaving the teacher in a position where she has nothing left at the end of the term to enable her to find place of prospective employment and therefore she has to fall back on the distributor who secured the first job. Leaving aside these evils which could be corrected were teachers organized, the question of salaries remains to be adjusted. It is a notorious fact that there has been a steady withdrawal of competent material from pedagogical circles during the last four years of high prices. The salaries now represent the best talent and the most competent persons who had no difficulty in finding positions in other professions that brought a more commendable return to the holders. A sufficient reports a shortage of some 2,000 teachers, Nevada cannot find applicants for 50 per cent of the rural schools, and in the middle west where the ratio of families is greater than on the frontier there is a perfect famine of talent. The only way to meet the demand is to furnish an incentive for girls and women to remain in the teaching profession by elevating the salaries to a parity with those of ordinary commercial life. Teachers have weighty responsibilities that frequently exceed those of the parents, and every encouragement should be given those in school life to give their best to moulding the youthful mind in preparation for useful and honorable citizenship.

Rising above partisan consideration, in one of the most remarkable documents which the discussion of the treaty and the league covenant has brought forth, Senator Thomas of Colorado, democrat, has declared in a letter to the Colorado democratic state executive committee that he cannot under his oath of office vote for the ratification of the treaty in its present form.

The letter, which is the production of a man of broad views and patriotic purposes, has fallen like a bomb in the camp of the administration. It is the more significant in that it has been made public just at the time when the president and his supporters are making all manner of appeals for the quick ratification of the treaty and league covenant without change. Not only that but they are setting in motion all possible party machinery to drive senators to vote as the president dictates.

The demand of the administration for a permanent army of half a million men, which has lately been presented to the military affairs committee of the house, is not upheld by Maj. Gen. James W. McAndrew, chief of staff of the American expeditionary force. General McAndrew, in testifying before that committee, declared that the recommendation of the war department was unnecessarily large, and that, in his opinion, a permanent military establishment of 300,000 men would be sufficient.

This is believed by many to be the maximum, military strength and probably above the maximum that will be provided by congress. Advocates of the larger force urged by the administration have had negligible success in convincing the members of the necessity of an army of 500,000 men while other representatives of the administration have been laboring clamorously at the senate end of the capital to convince that body that the league of nations means unbreakable peace.

CHANGE PRISON FARM MANAGER

The state prison farm is in for another change of management. Elton Twaddle, who has been superintendent during the past seven months, has stepped down and out. William Douglas, an employee at the prison proper, having been selected in his place. Douglas took charge today. During the management of Twaddle the farm has made an excellent showing. Considering the dry year, more grain and hay was cut and threshed than ever before in the history of the state property, and the institution has been on a profit basis, the returns showing something over $5,000 above expenses. A statement of receipts from and expenditures for the prison farm from March to August, inclusive, shows a net profit of $3,481.74. The sales from products of the farm during that period amounted to $10,425.54, while the expenses of operating the farm were $6,943.80.

NEW YORK MONEY FOR DIVIDE CO.

New York capital is going into the Divide district without any fear of the boom collapsing. This was shown yesterday when two ten-horse wagon loads of machinery left the Wittenberg yards for the Mutual Divide Mining company. The equipment is one of the greatest seen on the Divide, as it includes a double drum hoist operated with a 75-horsepower motor, a two stage compressor and boiler for a 10x10 galloway frame of Oregon pine. The Mutual group is situated near the Rosetta and west of where the diamond drill is operating on the Hecla. The company is backed by L. Harburger, of New York, one of the best known mining operators there, who has been one of the most prominent figures in raising funds for the Divide section.

ORGANIZE SCHOOL BAND.

Matthew Kelly, organizer of the Las Vegas grammar school band, and who served as its instructor during the past two years, has been appointed music instructor and band leader by the school trustees. The appointment eliminates the special tuition fee formerly required from the parents whose boys were members of the band, and gives the school a permanency in the school.

TRI-WEEKLY SERVICE FROM SOUTH RESUMED

Starting Sunday, October 12, the Tonopah & Tidewater railroad will resume a tri-weekly schedule in and out of Goldfield. When the daily service was started some months ago it was anticipated that business would continue to increase and eventually put the daily schedule on a paying basis, but the Tonopah-Divide strike made conditions worse instead of better.

What Keeps a Battery Young

To be reliable, a storage battery must have well-made plates.

Battery solution must be proper strength and required purity.

Battery jars must be mechanically strong and must allow no leakage of current or battery solution.

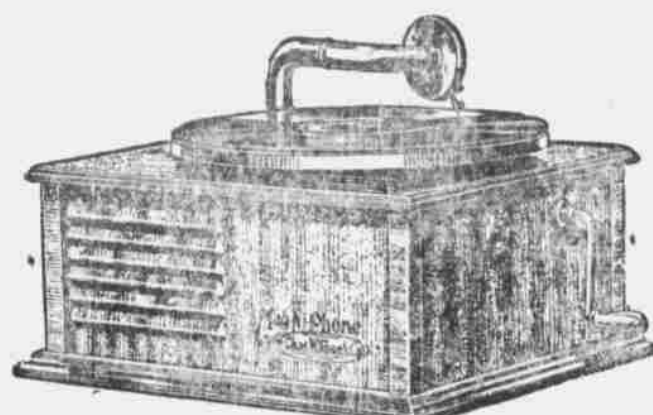

But it's the insulation between the plates that keeps that battery full of life and adds months to its term of useful service.

Drop in and ask us to tell you about Threaded Rubber Insulation, and some of the records it has made in keeping batteries on the job far beyond what used to be the battery age limit.
